AliveTek Creates New Online Infectious Disease Prevention Training for College Students

Clearwater, FL, July 7, 2020 — AliveTek, Inc, a leader in e-learning development, is launching a new e-learning training entitled Stay Safe. Stop the Spread. Infectious Disease Control™ – College Edition. This online course helps ease the transition of students back on campus by helping them understand the spread of infectious diseases such as COVID-19, active roles they can take in prevention, and educating them on new campus guidelines and policies to stay safe and well, with practical tips they can implement right away in their day-to-day activities. The curriculum follows the Social Ecological Model and encourages students to think about how their behaviors and choices impact those around them and the entire campus community.

Based on the Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommendations, and the American College Health Association (ACHA) recommendations for campuses, this course provides students with information to help them make educated decisions regarding their health. Topics include, covering your mouth and nose when you cough or sneeze, personal hygiene, the importance of disinfecting belongings, tips for healthier lifestyles in college, plus some of the impacts they will see on campus including dining, living arrangements, event regulations and what to do if they have symptoms. The 20-minute course has customizable opportunities for campuses to ensure campus/local specific guidelines are included.

“This timely and vital resource helps campuses train new and returning students on the steps needed to ensure a safe and healthy campus experience.” Sandy Mills-Alford, President and CEO of AliveTek, Inc., continued, “The learning experience is customized for each client and designed for on- and off-campus students. It illustrates how each of us can take the steps needed to minimize risk and keep our campuses and communities safe.”
